Dear FLINTSTONES people,

The Superstone story in issue #15 was super-cool! Has Superstone ever been seen before? Where? Can I get more Superstone comics? I'm glad those two kids didn't get away with anything and that Superstone saved the day. Fred really is a hero! I don't think he should've revealed his secret identity at the end of the story in the last panel, though.

It was funny to see a caveman version of a comic-book convention. What other comics besides what Barney was collecting—"Tar Pit of Mystery"—do you think they had back then? Bat-Rock? Wonder Cavewoman? Green Lanstone? I bet Barney's comic collection from that time would be worth a lot today! Or at least weigh a lot, huh? HA-HA-HA!

Hey, won't the Superman people get upset with Superstone for stealing his line on the cover? Oh, I guess you guys kinda are the Superman people, huh? Any chance of a Superstone/Superman crossover? I bet Gazoo could make it happen! Or Mxyzptlk? Maybe you could too!

Ken Sanchez
Stephenson, Nevada
KENCHE255@aol.com

Superstone originally appeared on the Flintstones TV show. Anyone else want to see more Superstone? A Superman/Superstone crossover? Anyone else want to see this? Write us! If not Superstone, maybe a special guest appearance by Super Cow from COW AND CHICKEN, si?

Dear gang,

FLINTSTONES AND JETSONS #15 was the best issue so far! I liked both of the stories.

The Superstone story was my favorite, but what I wanted to talk about is the Jetsons story. "Cybersox" showed more modern inventions. They should always be a few years ahead of us with their gadgets and appliances and stuff. I have a computer I do my homework on and get on the Internet. Poor George. He's really not cut out for the future and machines. They always seem to be against him. I would like to have seen what Yakworld was like in virtual reality.

Will Guardino
Jasper, Mississippi

You can't visit Yakworld on the Internet (as far as we know), but you can visit DC Comics on America Online at keyword DC COMICS and visit the DC website at DCComics.com and the Cartoon Network website at CartoonNetwork.com. E you there!

Dear FLINTSTONES AND JETSONS,

When are you going to have solo stories about Dino or Astro? Or how about a crossover?

Donna Fletcher
Andover, Maine

We have a kind of crossover planned, which will include Dino and Astro, for issue #21, Donna. Be sure to pick it up in two months!

Dear FLINTSTONES,

Will there be a Gruesomes/Flintstones special for Halloween? Will there be a Christmas special?

I'd like to see some adventures of Pebbles and Bamm Bamm as teenagers.

I pick up each issue of FLINTSTONES whenever I can find it, but sometimes it's hard to find.

Thanks for a great comic!

I share it with my brother and my friend Abbie.

J. Bravermann
Boston, Massachusetts

We had a Gruesome story in issue #14, but this issue is our Holiday special. Hope you like it.

Any other votes for some stories about teenaged Pebbles and Bamm Bamm?

Dear FLINTSTONES AND JETSONS comic,

I love your book. Why don't you adapt some of the TV shows to comic-book form? Was there ever a Flintstones movie in the theaters? Someone said there was, but I don't believe them! More Dino!

Thanks for printing my letter.

Chris Michaels
Duarte, California

Thanks for writing, Chris. The TV shows are so good that they stand on their own, and we like adding to the Flintstone and Jetson history instead of just retelling it. There was a movie called "A Man Called Flintstone" that came out way back in 1966. You can find it at your neighborhood video store.
